Seattle real estate developer Mark Schuster has won another award for his book “Lofty Pursuits: Repairing the World One Building at a Time.”

Schuster's memoir of his career in real estate includes a sometimes harrowing account of the building of the award-winning Mosler Lofts, an environmentally friendly condominium project in Seattle's Belltown neighborhood.

Schuster has received the 2011 Eric Hoffer Book Award in the business books category. The Hoffer awards acknowledge outstanding works produced by small publishers across the country. His book was published by Brown Books Publishing Group.

The judges described “Lofty Pursuits” as “truly an inspiring book, teaching us of lessons learned and reminding us hard work, perseverance and selecting the most honorable course of action matters.”

Earlier, Schuster's book received the Reader Views Reviewer's Choice Award.

Schuster is the founder and head of the Seattle real estate investment and development firm, The Schuster Group.
